On November 24th 1963 Alec Hiddell was shot in the basement of Dallas Police Headquarters by Jack Ruby. In 1952, both Hiddell and Lee Harvey Oswald were selected by United States Intelligence for a Soviet infiltration programme. Hiddell, a fluent Russian speaker from New York and Oswald, from New Orleans, lived separate lives and in 1959 both were placed into the Soviet Union, Hiddell as on Harvey Lee Oswald. It was because of this that confusion arose within the Warren Commission in the wake of the assassination of President John F. Kennedy, when the Commission, investigating Oswald, regularly found him turning up in different places at the same time. JFK, John Wilkes Booth and the Real Oswald commences in 1980 when Harvard Professor Ralph Dykstra, in possession of explosive information, enlists the help of a former student who was an unemployed lawyer, one John St. Helen, a Texan, to go out and find the real Lee Harvey Oswald. This invitation came about because St. Helen had confided in Dykstra that he believed he was the great, great grandson of John Wilkes Booth, who himself had been helped to escape after he assassinated Abraham Lincoln, finally settling in Texas. John St. Helen, having been given the name of a member of the dreaded Yugoslav covert Black Hand organization, began asking questions and was warned off his investigation by a powerful New York lawyer, Ben hanks junior, as well as a colonel from Stasi, the East German state security, whom he fell foul of during a catastrophic student prank that went wrong in East Berlin in 1977 resulting in the death of Ben hanks junior's eldest son. During his search for the real Oswald, St. Helen is pursued by Black Hand, the Albanian Sigurimi and Dominion Holding, an ultra covert American organization affiliated to the CIA.
