Chinese and Annamese Ceramics Found in the Philippines and Indonesia Adrian Malcolm Joseph Slipcase Edition. First Edition. 30 x 21.5 cm. Richly illustrated monograph on the Yuan dynasty Chinese trade ceramics of the 13th - 14th centuries and the northern Vietnamese wares of the 14th - 15th centuries. The Chinese wares reflect the earliest regular use of underglaze cobalt blue and copper red decorative techniques, and are characterized by their remarkable strength and purity of line. The Vietnamese (so called 'Annamese') wares differ from the Chinese wares in the range of techniques employed - included in the Vietnamese group are not only cobalt blue underglazed vessels but also their brown glazed and unique green glazed wares, as well as overglaze enamel decoration. Design elements of the Vietnamese wares, while reflecting strong influence from China, are executed with a freedom rarely seen on Chinese ceramics. Essential and much sought-after reference
