An overdue confession makes one tough-to-keep secret

Jada doesn't want to hear what her sister, Marina, has to confess. But when Marina blurts out the truth, there's no way to turn back time. Now Jada has a secret she must keep from her fake husband, Ian, and there's no way that'll turn out well.

Ian believes he knows whodunnit, and since he can't do anything about it until the three-day weekend is over, he might as well focus his energies on the lovely lady who's haunting his dreams. Too bad the house is full of annoying guests who keep getting in his way.

Paradise has its problems for everyone, except Ms. Kitty. She's living the good life with free massages and all the fresh salmon she can eat, above the drama until she spies something tempting flouncing around on Agatha Bringore's skinny feet. Time until pounce: one, two, three ...

Cliffhanger warning! This story is approximately 22,000 words long, 75 print pages.
