The world of healing comes to life in this beautifully written first novel that compels us to learn about Angela Grayson and how “the shot” changes her life forever. The land of enchantment, New Mexico sets the stage for the life of our central character Anglea Grayson. She sees at a young age what “the shot” can do to a person. She is propelled mysteriously into the land of herbs and natural healing by just one incident at age nine. Grandmother Maya teaches her that all healing begins in the garden with plants. But when her own mother becomes ill how can she help her if their beliefs are very different? How will she be able to love her mother through this crisis? She listens to her dreams and to the indigenous holy man Augin. He helps her with her thoughts and actions as her mother is seeking treatment. We all have choices and as a healer she must learn how to help and when to let go. Listening consciously to mind, body and spirit she learns the true ways of helping and healing. Holistic in approach and in spirit this brilliant first novel touches us in both heart and soul. We can't put it down.
