Archaeological Excavations at Tullahedy, County Tipperary: Neolithic Settlement in North Munster

Hilary Kelleher, Rose Cleary

Conducted as part of a road construction project, an archaeological investigation uncovered an enclosed Neolithic settlement at Tullahedy, near Nenagh, County Tipperary, Ireland. The site was located on an esker with Neolithic activity dated to between 3670-3460 BC. The settlement comprised three Neolithic houses, two within a natural hollow and a third near a former lakeshore. Lavishly illustrated, this volume presents the findings in an attractive and comprehensive manner.
